NEW YORK DERALD, TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 22 1839 - TRIPLE SHREET.

journey to Moscow. Strakosch made some good engagements and some bad ones. He sed a figure in introducing the bad ones first; the public was disappointed, and not a little indignant, and the Opera sustained a severe shock. It is a delicate exotic in its best moments, and the slightest coldness on the part of the people who cherish it is liable to result fatally. But Ullman went to work with his accustomed energy and pluck to redeem the first false step, and produced a new opera-the "Sicilian Vespers"-in such a splendid way thatit could not fall to attract the attention of the public. But here the management missed another figure by giving to Madame Colson, whose speciality is light operas of the comic French school, a rôle requiring the full dra-matic powers of a first class lyric tragedienne. Chiefly, as we believe, for this reason, the new opera did not achieve the success which its me-rits deserved, and all from missing a figure. Had Gazzaniga or Albertini sung in the "Vespers," the result would have been quite different. And now, when the patrons of the Opera, the fashionable, and critical and artistic circles of the metropolis, are slowly recovering from their operatic disappointments, the managers must be careful if they would redeem their season. They must not make any more mistakes, nor miss another figure. They must bring out their best operas, and put forward their best artists in the most favorable light. The managers have everything in their favor—a fine Opera house, a wealthy and cultivated audience, and a first class company, equal to the proper interpretation of any work. If they will make the best use of these advantages, they may yet redeem the errors of the past, and close their campaign with the honors, the spoils and the ovations of conquering heroes.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

United States Troops Not Ordered to Seize Mexican Territory - The Pimes and Marricopas Indians of Arizona-Favorable Financial Condition of the Go vernment, &c. Washington, Nov. 21, 1859.

I have authority to say there is no foundation in the report that a Cabinet Council was held on Saturday to consider matters relating to Mexico, nor have troops been ordered to the frontier for the purpose of invading Mexico. Only such have been ordered as may be considered neessary for protection to American citizens and interests It is said the President will say but little, or reserve his remarks on Mexico and our relations with that country in his forthcoming Message, till he knows the result of Mr. McLane's mission as to the treaty under negotiation It is expected the result will be known early in December and it is believed here the treaty will be ratified.

The Colchester Bank Case-Trial of Warren La and-His Honorabie Acquittal. SPECIAL DESPATCH TO THE NEW YORK HERALD.

The examination of Mr. Warron Leland, of your city, on charges of passing false tokens to and defrauding the Colchester Bank, came off here this afternoon, before Justice Morgan, and resulted in the acquittal of the accused.

Mr. Leland was in attendance, accompanied by his brother and his counsel, Measurs. Wells and Strong, of Hartford. The prosecution was only represented by Mr.

Halsey, of Norwich.

Court was opened in the Town Hall basement by Justice Morgan, at about half past one o'clock P. M. Some twenty or thirty persons were present, mostly parties interested in the case or sufferers by the Colchester Bank failure. Mr. Dewell, the late President of the Bank, was of the around which counsel had gathered, and announced that he was ready for business.

Mr. Halsoy then rose and raid:—May it please your Mr. Halsey then rose and raid:—May it please your Honor, I appear here to-day merely to explain the situation in which the prosecution is placed. It had been the intention of my associates, Mr. Starkweather and Mr. Waite, to appear here with me, but the former has been detained by a case he has in the Supreme Court, and the latter by halsposition. Yet we under stood that it was not necessary for us to come here in anticipation of any trial of this cause. Our mais reliance was upon the testimony of Mr. Samuel F. Jones, the principal witness, your bonor will remember, in the former trial, before Justice Lamb; and we know that Mr. Jones could, if he chose, declined appear as a witness and there would be an end of the matter. Mr. Jones has chosen to take that course. He was in Norwich on Sunday last, and was then summoned to appear here to-day, and he signified to us distinctly that he would not probably be here. The case therefore stands before the court with here. The case therefore stands before the court with-out any evidence on which we could go forward or claim hold Mr. Leland for trial. The matter is therefore in to hold Mr. Leland for trial. The matter is therefore in the hands of the Court, either for a net. pros. by the Grand Jury, or dismissal by the Court.

Judge Wells, counsel for Mr. Leland, said:—We have no choice as to the mode in which the case is disposed of. We think Mr. Jones, as a sensible man, has come to the right conclusion, and everybody will think so that heard his testimony on the former trial. He has taken a prudent content of the court of the dest course at last; it is only unfortunate that he ever pursued any other. It is not material as to the manner in which the matter shall be disposed of. But (to Mr Halsey) how about that third count?

Mr. Halsey, (laughing)—Oh! that new count; I have not troubled myself much about it.

Justice Morgan—I do not see, then, but the case is ended.

Judge Wells—And your honor will enter on the record an order that the case is dismissed and the bail dis-Justice Morgan—I will take that course.

Judge Wells-And there is nothing before your Honor against Mr. Leland?

Justice Morgan—I don't see that there is

Mr. Leland and his friends then left the court, and after a good dinner at the Keeney House returned to Hartford. Mr. Leland's counsel was prepared to prove by the affi-davit of Mr. Stephen B. Cushing, of the firm of Sickies & davit of Mr. Stephen B. Cushing, of the firm of Sickles & Cushing of New York, and other evidence, that Samuel F. Jones paid into the concern of Jones & Wilcox, between May 28, 1886, and Sept. 30, 1887, in cash, the handsome sum of $37,813 18. This was during the time the Colchester Bunk was in operation, and it will be remembered that on the former trial Mr. Jones testified that he had himself only six or seven thousand dollars capital to put into that concern. These payments were made, as shown by Jones and Wilcox's books in every month during the period named, from two to half dozen instalments per month, and in sums ranging from $200 to $3,500 at a time. It is said that it was fear of this disclosure, and perhaps of others more serious in their naclosure, and perhaps of others more serious in their na-ture, and also dread of facing the indignation of his for-mer personal and political friends, who think he has wronged and betrayed them, that induced Mr. Jones to absent himself to day

Academy o Music-"The Magte Frate." One of the very best of Mozart's operas, and the original favorite of all of them with the composer himself, "The Magic Flute," was given last evening, for the first time bore, to a crowded house. It was the very last operatic work of the great master, who wrote it for the Vienna Opera House, but was only able to conduct the orchestra during the first nine or ten representations. He was then seized with the illness which terminated his life in the morning of a giorious career. When the opera was per-formed and he was unable to go to the theatre, Mozart would sit at home, with his watch in his hand, marking the progress of his work—his latest and best-beloved

the composer, and we can give no better and heisfar

the composer, and we can give no better and briefe "Don Giovanni" at every step. The devotees of "classi-cal" music find one of their strongest arguments against Verdi in the fact that he often repeats himself. Mozart, their exemplar, not only repeats ideas, but actual forms into a minute analysis of the "Magic Flute." only too thankful for a novelty, and do no only too thankful for a novelty, and do not purpose to enter upon the question as to what is and what is not classical and legitimate in music. The "Magte Flute" has many choice morecour, its fantastical plot affords an excellent opportunity for the display of line scenery and handsome dresses its choruses breathe the pure spirit of a master, and its orchestral accompaniment is dintinguished by the elaborate symphonic richness of instrumentation in which Mozart stands far above all the other composers.

The managers of the Academy have given this opera in very good style. The artists, with the exception of Junca, were all in prime condition. Junca was suffering from severe indisposition, but rather than disappoint the public, he sang his rôle, and, under the circumstances, was very good.

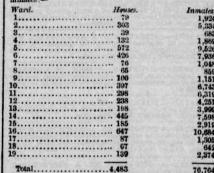

he sang his rôle, and, under the circumstances, was very good.

Gazzaniga and Colson were very successful in their rôles; the tenor Stigelli improved upon the favorable impression which he had already made here. All the small parts were exceedingly well sung, and, for the first time this season, a chorus received the honor of a positive encore. The mise en scene was very fine, and the whole performance an exceedingly satisfactory one.

This evening the "Polinto" will be given at the Academy, with Albertial and Beaucardé. The "Magic Fittle" will be repeated as Wednesday and Friday. On Thursday Miss A. Patti, Signori Brignoit and Ferri will sing in "Lucia," so there will be quite enough of opera to satisfy the most ardent habitué.

BOWERY THEATER-" THE THEER ERAS IN THE LIPE OF FIREMAN."—A play, with the above title, founded en, and illustrative of, events in the life of the late Senator Broderick, was put on the stage last night at the old Bowery. The fact of the management having been obliged to postpone its representation until after the Broderick obsequies, led many to suppose that it contained something objectionable to the Fire Department, and that, consequently, its performance last night migh be attended with some disturbance. The contrary proved to be the case. The play was very well received, considering that it possesses little merit to commend it to FIREMAN."—A play, with the above title, founded en, and to be the case. The play was very well received, considering that it possesses little merit to commend it to an audience beyond that which the local character of the plot gives it. With the exception of an occasional cheer from the "gods" and from the whole lower part of the house, occasioned by two "lushy fellows" having succeeded in crossing the partition which separates the orchestra seats from the pit, and quiety ensconcing themselves in the former, to them forbidden spot, from which they were forcibly elected, there was separates the ordered seems of the former, to them forbidded spot, from which they were forcibly ejected, there was not the least demonstration. The play opens with a scene in one of our engine houses. Broderick (Mr. Allen) on the eve of his departure for Caffornia, meets his companions and fellow inborers to bid them "good bye," at the same time assuring them that, though about to be separated, they should never be forgotten, and that those principles which, as a fireman, he held in common with them, would prove the basis of his after actions. The duel, &c., represented in accordance with the newspaper accounts, and many of the circumstances which brought about and culminated in the fatal neeting, are inservoyen. A grand tableau, in which a fire engine and her men were the most conspicuous objects, closed the piece.

By a recent inspection, made under the direction of the Police Department, it appears that there are 4,453 tene ment houses, or houses where there are over three fami-lies residing, in the entire city of Brooklyn, having 76,764 sponsible for all violations of city ordinances.
